

Sunit P. Jariwala, MD

Sunit P. Jariwala is a recent graduate of Robert Wood Johnson Medical School. In July 2005, he will begin his Residency in Internal Medicine. Sunit presently serves as the National Community Service Co-Chair for the American Association of Physicians of Indian Origin, Medical Students/Residents/Fellows (AAPI-MSRF) section. Throughout his involvement with AAPI, Sunit has coordinated the organization's 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 National Service Projects, which focused upon Minority Bone Marrow Donor Registration Among South Asians, and Cardiovascular Disease Awareness Among South Asians, respectively. Sunit is presently co-coordinating the 2004-2005 National Service Project, which is focusing upon Anti-Tobacco Awareness Among South Asians. In support of this project, AAPI-MSRF has recently been awarded a grant by the CHEST Foundation, the philanthropic arm of the American College of Chest Physicians. Sunit is also the Founder and Present Chair-person of the South Asian Marrow Association of Recruiters (SAMAR) Network for Life, which aims to reduce the minority bone marrow donor disparity within the National Marrow Donor Program. Sunit completed his undergraduate degree in Molecular Biology and Biochemistry at Rutgers University and presently resides in East Windsor, New Jersey.